A member of the Class of 1980 at Clarkson, Arnie Boldt earned his degree in Technical Communications as one of the pioneer students in that program. For the past 21 years, he has served as Managing Partner of Arnold-Smith Associates, a career transition consulting firm based in suburban Rochester, New York. In addition to authoring two books (“No-Nonsense Job Interviews” and “Resumes for the Rest of Us,” Career Press) and co-authoring two others (“No-Nonsense Resumes” and “No-Nonsense Cover Letters,” Career Press), he has contributed to over 40 titles relating to resume writing and career transition, most notably the “Knock ‘Em Dead” series by best-selling author Martin Yate. He has been nominated five times for the prestigious TORI, a global award recognizing excellence in the resume writing field.

For the past seven years, Arnie has consulted with the Career Management Center at the University of Rochester’s (NY) Simon Business School on resume development and personal branding for MBA and MS students. In addition, he has helped Stanford University graduate business students develop impactful LinkedIn profiles as they seek to advance their careers. He has been quoted in career-related articles appearing in The National Business Employment Weekly, and the online edition of the Fresno Bee, along with radio and cable TV appearances on local stations in Rochester, NY.

Arnie prides himself on his experience working with the widest array of job seekers, including skilled trades people, new graduates, engineers, educators, and top level executives. A native of LeRoy, New York, Arnie makes his home in a suburb of Rochester (NY) with his wife, Gail, and their Chihuahuas, Countess Electra and Duchess Windy.
